Senator Allison on the Money Question.

In opening the campaign in Iowa at Emmetsburg, Senator Allison devoted his attention largely to the currency question, and made a strong argument for the gold standard, taking that stand without equivocation. The speech will attract attention and will be extensively quoted as kignificant, because of the fact that the senator, who is a member of the senate finance committee, and has long been a financial authority in matters of legislation of that character, has been one of the distinguished national Republican leaders who were so conservative on the silver question as to be open to criticism by their party assoclates, Mr. Allison being, ni fact, one of those who opposed the insertion of the word "gold" in the St. Louis platform, though he never wavered in his support of both platform and ticket.

The Emmetsburg speech reveals that Senator Allison is now advocating the gold standard as the basis of the currency system, and as being absolutely ssary to the safety of our credit and the continued prosperity of the United In the course of his address he took occasion to repudiate the double standard idea in connection with the free coinage of sliver at the ratio of 16 to 1 theory, as dangerous, reasoning that it means nothing more nor less than a single silver standard, with a depreciated dollar. This, Mr. Allison holds, as do all sound money men, means simply that the poor will suffer by the reduction of the purchasing power of the dollars received for wages, defraud those holding insurance policies, depreciate the savings of the 5,000,-000 depositors in savings banks, as well as all credits, and produce stagnation and paralysis in all lines of business, which would continue for years, Every phase of the silver question is effectively dealt with, including the argument that is based upon the per capita theory, in which the silver advocates attempt to show a relationship between the volume of money and the prices of commodities. Senator Allison demonstrates clearly the absurdity of this claim by showing that the prices, according to the per capita theory, should be higher to-day than they were previous to 1873, when the fact is they are lower. Yet financial statistics which Mr. Allison quoted, show that there is a greater volume of money in circulation than there was in 1973, while prices then were much higher than they are now. There can be no disputing of this point. The Republican party and the sound money, or gold standard men, will rejoice to note that Senator Allison, who has beretofore been in some quarters regarded as too compromising in his views, has taken the stand he has. Also that the people of Iowa, which was re garded in the 1896 campaign as a doubtful state on this question, are endorsing his position enthusiastically. The incident is one of the many similar cases throughout the country, and in view of the probability that there will be an attempt to revive the silver craze in 1900, and in the coming Congress, it portende undergone, to some extent, a change which is discouraging to leaders of Mr. Bryan's school

West Virginia Coal Again. We observe by an extensive editorial article in the Intelligencer that West Virginia coal is largely shipped to free trade England. Wherefore, then, the high tariff on it, which it is claimed is necessary for "protection?" Protection from what?—Register.

The Intelligencer quoted from the leading from and coal trade paper in England a full explanation of the reasons for the conditions which are advancing these prospects. They are wholly due to the situation which exist in free trade England and not to trade conditions existing in protected America. If our contemporary, were fair to its readers it would bring out these facts which, on high English authority, present so much encouragement to West Virginia's chief industry and make clear the deplorable situation in the mining industry of Great Britain and other European countries.

The Intelligencer did not state that our coal is now being shipped to England in large quantities, but did state that we are furnishing British steamers with coal, and that the British ambas sador had recommended the product for that purpose; moreover, that the English paper tooked with apprehensions upon the prospect that we would invade the British market. It also admitted that we could supply all the British coaling stations in the world better than Cardiff and the Tyne could, and this was attributed to the bad condition of the industry prevailing in free trade Eng-

Incident to this question, the Intelligencer published yesterday an article from the free trade New York Times, showing how the West Virginia coal industry has wonderfully developed in the past ten years, and that our product is already "known throughout the world." It shows how, in the county of Marion alone, of which Fairmont i the county seat, and the center of the upper Monongahela coal field, the production has increased from 100,000 tons a year in 1887, eleven years ago, to the 2,000,000 tons which this year's production will reach. This is but a drop in the bucket to what the out-put of the entire state will be, although Marion county is one of the most important fields, and the industry in this state is far from what it will be in the development of the near future. The great West Virginia coal industry has won fame in other lands and has developed under our protective system. William L. Wilson, the great Democratic free trade leader, lost his seat in Congress by advocating free coal and free lumber and aiming at these products in his tariff bill, and he represented the par-ticular district to which reference is here made.

France's Problem. The situation between England and France grows in importance as the days go by. The impression in Europe now is that there is but one thing that can prevent war over the Fashoda claim and that will be for France to relinquish her position. England as a party to back down is entirely out of the question, for the unanimous endorsement of the course of the government by the press and the public renders the retirement of that country utterly impossible. It is stated confidently that even a hope of a complomise on the part of Great Britain cannot be en-tertoined. While the gravity of the situation in volving war between England and France cannot be overestimated, there is a confidence expressed in some wellinformed quarters that France does not dare to pursue her claims to the extremity that would make drastic measures by England a certainty and a necessity. The problem confronting France is how she can relinquish her claim with honor, and without promoting and increasing the already strained domestic conditions which are causing the government so much anxiety.

England's great naval power is in itself a strong argument for a graceful backdown on France's part, if it is possible to back down gracefully without humiliation. In this respect the position of France is not unlike that of Spain some months ago, though there is no intention to make an odlous comparis of the condition or the character of the two countries. The French are a people of wonderful resources, and the politicians and diplomats are shrewd enough to find some way out of the mess into which Marchand has gotten himself and his government.

An Office Seeker's Revenge. Democratic organs that are declaring that Congressman Dayton and other West Virginia congressmen have "been treacherous to labor interests" since their election, should be more specific This is a charge which cannot be borne out by facts. The reference to Congressman Dayton's course, by the Wheeling Democratic organ, and a pronunclamento set forth in "display type" and signed by a Fairmont Republican, who openly boasts that his future is to he devoted to the defeat of Mr. Dayton and Senator Elkins, will be amusing to those who are familiar with the circumstances and who know the individual referred to. It so happens that he was a candidate for postmaster at Fairmont and did not receive the appoint

This person then immediately rushed into the Democratic organs with manifestoes announcing what he was going to do about it. He is still using the Democratic press and still issuing manifestoes. His personal feelings will not be relieved until he accomplishes the unfioling of Dayton, and then, to use his own solemn warning, he will enter upon the self-imposed task of defeating Mr. Elkins for the United States senate in 1900. He will look after the election of that legislature himself. The person whom our Wheeling con temporary names is the only one of the candidates for the Fairmont postoffice who places his personal disappointment above his party principles to the extent that he is doing his best to send a Democrat to Congress and will next dictate the successor of Senator Elkins! They a more pronounced feeling for sound are all loyal, deserving Republicans, money. Even Democratic sentiment has (while the person referred to is flocking with the Democrate and venting himself through the Democratic organs in a way that emphasizes the good judgment shown by Mr. Dayton in not selecting him for postmaster.

Usually, in selecting men to fill places true blue party men are chosen, and if the Democratic organs see anything to admire in a person who sacrifices his principles to gratify a personal feeling and to vote for a representative who will vote against the principles he pretends to espouse, they are welcome to the comfort they can get out of it.

In the meantime, the Fairmont postoffice is getting along in the excellent hands in which it was placed, and the citizens of that city are sending and repeiving their mail regularly and without complaint. At last accounts both Mr. Dayton and Mr. Elkins were pursuing the even tenor of their ways, undisturbed by terrific manifestoes predicting the awful political fate in store for

Referring to a comment the Intelligencer made on criticisms of our peace commissioners for taking their families to Paris, and some newspaper inquiries as to whether the government would pay the bill, and also on comments of a sneering nature in the Spanish press to the same effect, the Register wants to know if this paper did not refer to the Hawaiian commission, which was likened to a party of Cook's tourists. The Intelligencer meant precisely what it said. Its comment was based upon London and Paris dispatches, which referred particularly to the similarity of Madrid sneers and comments indulged in by certain American papers. There was no 'confusing of incidents." and the Register's gratuitous correction is unwarranted.

The cost of the Cuban and the Philippine campaigns to Spain was six hundred millions of dollars. This is a good sized obligation for a bankrupt nation to face, and no wonder the Spanish commissioners would have the United States to assume the so-called Cuban debt-something which the United States has no intention of doing.

The eloquent comparison made by Hon. Chauncey M. Depew between the condition of the country previous to the last Presidential election and the degree of prosperity witnessed to-day was one of the most effective political speeches ever made by the New York orator.

New Publication.

A most instructive book for boys "The Treasure Divers," by Charles Frederick Holder, and which is constructed somewhat after the style of structed somewhat after the style of Jules Verne's romances. It comprises the supposed adventures of a boy in the depths of the sea in a sub-marine boat, siying at the same time useful knowledge of all deep sea animals known to science without any dry technicalities.—Dood, Mead & Co., New York; Frank Stanton, Wheeling.

The writer who produces an entirely original creation in literature these days, is entitled to the attention of every literary person; and if his work is at the same time wholly logical, true to life and of absorbing interest, he surely can lay claim to a careful read-ing. Such has been the accomplish-ment of Randall Irving Tyler in producing a remarkable work entitled "Four Months After Date." It is a vivid "Four Months After Date." It is a vivid story, full of sharply drawn business detail, which is itself as fascinating as romance. And there is some clever character drawing, notably that of a young helress who, for sheer love of adventure, undertakes to block a business deal, and is only removed as an obstacle by marrying 'Billy's' partner, It is a strong piece of work, and if not a 'novel with a purpose,' surely serves a purpose as a keen arraignment of one of the destructive forces of our highstrung society.—Stuyvesant Publishing Co., New York.

"The Trumpeters" and other poems make up a volume of very good verse of varied subject and theme.—Haworth Publishing Co., Washington, D. C.

"Pinocchio's Adventures in Wonder land" is one of those unique tales of a lively fancy that has its own little world and atmosphere, and that carries with it an especial charm. It has the originality of "Alice in Wonderland" and the same veris militude. The fancy of the canvas writer makes the wooden puppet live, suffer from the consequences of many amusing prants, and quences of many amusing pranks, and finally, seeing the errors of all such thoughtless ways, turn into a happy, living, well-behaved, manly boy.—Jordan, Marsh & Co., Boston.

"The Title Mongers," by William Farquhar Payson, is a work that treats of snobocracy in this country and teaches a lesson, but whether it will be heeded by that class of society that covets a title more than an honest heart is another question. The author treats in an exceedingly interesting way a European syndicate that sent a titled Frenchman to this country to marry an helrens.—Dodd, Mead & Co., New York; Frank Stanton, Wheeling.

"Vibration the Law of Life," by W H. Williams, is the unique title of a unique work, which cannot fall to in terest the medical profession-but its terest the medical procession—but he easy and popular style makes it a book pre-eminently for the general reader and one that will be found immensely useful to everyone who would rather live than die.—Temple Publishing Co., Denver, Col.

"Meir Exofovitch," a Polish novel, translated by Iza Young, is a work which relates to the trials and persewhich feintes to the trials and perse-cutions of a sect of Jews known as Karaites, and through which runs the inevitable but ever attractive story of love, devotion and sacrifice—W. L. Al-ilson Co., New York; Frank Stanton, Wheeling Wheeling.

The Cost of Freeing Cuba.

The Cost of Freeing Cuba.

The United States are certainly entitled to retain possession of the Philippine Islands if the peace commissioners so decide, for the cost of the war runs far into the millions, and the end is not yet. The money paid out reaches an astonishing total. To free the stomach, liver, bowels and blood of disease, however, is not an expensive undertaking. A few dollars invested in Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will accomplish the task easily. The poor as well as the rich car afford it.

What Attracted the Crowd.

Parkersburg State Journal: There are queer signs displayed in every city our remnants. which finds their way into print, and Parkersburg has its share, but the palm is yielded to the following, which has drifted in from the far east. Mrs. Marshall, an indigent widow, went into the laundry business on a small scale. She had her sign painted upon the shutters of her front window like this:

Mrs. Mar Ishall undress punctually done Open See specimens I I shall undress punctually done in this window

The next morning when she went out to see what caused the crowd in waiting there she found that the left-hand blind had been blown back by the wind and the sign hardly read as she meant it should although it attracted outless growd. quite a crowd.

Cost Him the Limit.

Pittsburgh Dispatch: The Wheeling boys who came in last night had quite a bit of innocent fun at the expense of a bit of innocent fun at the expense of one of the Knights of Wheeling Com-mandery, whose name is Joseph Wheel-er. He is a shoe snerchant, and is of the same diminutive stature as the fa-mous Joseph Wheeler, and with his beard does not look unlike the hero of Santiago. It happened on Fifth ave-nue, when the street was crowded from curb to curb, and one of the boys asked in a loud voice, "Where's Joe Wheel-er?"

"Here I am," enswered Sir Knight Wheeler, and instantly he was sur-rounded by an enthusiastic crowd, all trying to shake hands with him. It was fully ten minutes before he was able to escape. The little incident cost him the extreme limit.
